

Promote Smart Decarceration

Grand Challenges in Social Work, using evidence to promote social justice and well-being

The Issue

The United States is the world leader in incarceration, which has led to staggering economic, social, and human costs for our society. This social justice crisis substantially over-incarcerates the most vulnerable groups; people of color, people living in poverty, and people with behavioral health disorders.

Societal Goal

With smart decarceration, we can reduce the prison and jail population by 1 million people in the next decade. This would entail a proactive, cross-sector, and evidence-driven approach that addresses existing racial and economic disparities and promotes a philosophical shift in how we think about incarceration and public safety.

A Decade of Work

- The Promote Smart Decarceration grand challenge efforts addresses those factors that have direct and immediate impact on adult criminal justice system processes and an individual's experience in the adult criminal justice system, with specific emphasis on the experience of incarceration.
- The Promote Smart Decarceration Grand Challenge is organized around, and uniformly focused on, three key outcomes of the adult criminal justice system: 1) Substantially reduce the incarcerated population in jails and prison; 2) Redress racial, economic, behavioral health disparities among the incarcerated; 3) Maximize public safety and community well-being.
- Reverse civic and legal exclusions for persons with criminal charges and convictions.
- Make reduction of racial and economic disparities a key outcome in decarceration efforts.
- Use incarceration primarily for the incapacitation of the most dangerous.
- Reallocate resources to community based supports.
